

Working for 20Sound

Looking to pickup casual work in the AV industry? 20Sound is looking for aspiring freelance sound and lighting technicians to assist with our up-coming event bookings.

We can offer casual contract work and on-the-job experience for those with aptitude and willingness to work. Much of the work occurs outside of normal business hours. Generally we try to give you at least 2 weeks notice of upcoming work to allow you to schedule your own commitments.

The work is physically demanding, so you will need to be able bodied and reasonably fit and healthy. Mechanical knowledge is an advantage, as is experience with programmable electronic systems.

All our work is project based and we schedule contract labour as required for each of the larger jobs. Although general experience in the AV industry is necessary to setup any job, we also require show operators who have more specialised experience and training in particular pieces of equipment such as digital sound desks or lighting controllers.

A current Police check, while not essential, is desirable as we do a lot of work for schools.

You need to be setup as a "Sole Trader" with your own ABN, Public Liability Insurance and vehicle. If you can afford it, you will find that a commercial van is invaluable for carting gear in a safe and secure manner and will give you an advantage in picking up more contract work in the industry.
